

Playing Mindgames

“In this fiercely competitive scenario, educational psychotherapy is a must to boost the morale of a student.”

‘..... rainbow’s spokesman said, ‘We decided to deal with J.E.E. candidates, because J.E.E. is the biggest competition that students face after HS /Eqvt. .... Our research is a hope in the field of educational psychotherapy. We expect our study will help keep all examination blues at bay.’ Like Dr. Maity, city psychiatrists also believe in the significance of psycho educational analysis and behavioural therapy to improve psychological status of students appearing for different competitive exams ..... Head of the department of psychiatry, CNMC said, ‘This is a good approach to meet the psycho-academic problems of teenagers. It’s especially helpful for those who already remain very much tense and anxious due to the high academic expectations of their parents. Though rare in this country, psychological counselling should be an essential tool to boost the morale of a student.’

The Statesman

Kolkata, September 15, 2003